Director's Notes...

Each time I compose Director's Notes, I am more and more swept away as I reflect on the power of a community. Amidst laughter, excitement, and the pure joy of working together, our cast, crew, production staff and many community volunteers have worked tirelessly to bring this story to life for you. I am honored to be a part of this organization, one that truly belongs to the community. This marks my 3rd season as Artistic Director and 5th year anniversary at The Athens. I thank you, our audience members, for your support of this beautiful theatre as we bring this show to you!

Beauty and the Beast is a play about transformation. The entire process of putting this show together has been about transformation as well. Five months ago my team and I started with 90 auditioned actors, a group of collaborative theatre artists and stage technicians, and a vision of how we could bring this story to life. Together, we have transformed ourselves into a team—a community—as we worked to bring this “tale as old as time” to the stage. I hope that you, too, are transformed by what you see, to dream a little harder, believe a little more, and to recognize the beauty that is found within--in yourself and in others.

Many people have worked tirelessly to bring this show to life. Without the hard work of theatrical artists, actors, and volunteers this show would not be possible. I absolutely LOVE working with people who can do great things for a wonderful community!

Enjoy the show!

Walt Disney first attempted unsuccessfully to adapt Beauty and the Beast into an animated feature film during the 1930s and 1950s. Following the success of The Little Mermaid (1989), Disney decided to adapt the fairy tale, which Richard Purdum originally conceived as a non-musical. Disney chairman Jeffrey Katzenberg eventually discontinued the idea and ordered that the film be a musical similar to The Little Mermaid instead. Lyricist Howard Ashman and composer Alan Menken wrote the film's songs. Ashman, who additionally served as an executive producer on the film, died of AIDS-related complications eight months before the film's release, and the film was dedicated to his memory.
